HINKLER MYSTERY SOLVED BODY & WRECK FOUND IN APENNINES IDENTIFIED BY PASSPORT

Florence, April 28.
The mystery of the disappearance nearly four months ago of the famous Australian aviator, Bert Hinkler, is believed to have been cleared up by the discovery of the wreckage of an aeroplane in a desolate region in the Apennines.

The wreck was found to contain the body of a man, on which a document bearing the name Herbert could be seen, the surname having been defaced by the weather.

The document states that the man was born at "Undaberg, Australia" which seems conclusive. Hinkler having been born at Bundaberg.

IDENTITY NOW ESTABLISHED.
A passport and other documents found near the body definitely confirm that the body is that of Hinkler.

Death must have been instantaneous as the plane apparently crashed and then caught on fire and the body partly burned. The wreckage was sighted by woodcutters.

Hinkler left London on January 7 in an attempt to fly to Australia and until to-day had never again been heard of. Extensive searches were carried out, but they were confined to the Alps region.

CLEVER PILOT.
Hinkler was not only a very clever pilot and a first class mechanic but a navigator of remarkable skill who was credited with an uncanny power of finding his way over unknown country and through the worst weather. He was also an inventor and designed the special undercarriage which has been adopted as the standard for all Avians.

For his England-Australia feat, the International Aeronautical Federation in 1929 gave him its gold medal, thus ranking him with such aviators as Lindbergh and Cobham. He then built his own design a small two engine amphibian machine, but, failing to interest people in it in England, took it to the United States. There he had no better luck, for he arrived in the midst of the big slump.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT.
Going then to Canada, he bought a Puss Moth aeroplane and in this accomplished one of the most remarkable feats in aviation.

Leaving New York he made a non-stop night flight of 1,700 miles to Jamaica—a record achievement. Most of the way he flew practically blind, for he had no light in his cabin and the moon, on which he relied to illuminate his compass, failed him frequently. From Jamaica he crossed the Caribbean Sea in heavy rain squalls to Maracaibo, Venezuela, and then went on via Trinidad to Port Natal, Brazil.

After being much delayed by the authorities he set out in December, 1931 to cross the South Atlantic. The clouds were both dense and of unusual depth and for 6 hours Hinkler flew only a few feet above the sea. Then rising he tried to get above the clouds, but, this being impossible, drove on through them at 10,000 ft. with a thunderstorm and terrific lightning raging round him. Nevertheless he landed on the African coast within 10 miles of his objective, Bathurst, British Gambia. He had covered about 2,000 miles in 22 hours and was the first man to fly the South Atlantic from west to east single-handed. The flight was also the first over made across the Atlantic in a light single-engine machine.

In 1932, Hinkler was awarded the Segrave Trophy, valued at $1,000, for "the most outstanding demonstration of the possibilities of transport by land, air or water" while in March, the International Aeronautical Federation pronounced him the greatest aviator of the world during 1931.—Router.

The new ransom demand is for four million Chinese dollars and two hundred pairs of woollen socks. Negotiations on this basis are proceeding very slowly.—Router.

BODY-LINE BOWLING

SUGGESTED NEW RULE

DRAWN UP BY AUSTRALIA

Melbourne, Apr. 28.

The Australian Board of Control have decided to ban body-line bowling, and have asked the M.C.C. to do likewise.

The Board have recommended the adoption of the sub-committee's additional rule to the laws of cricket, and have asked the M.C.C. for their co-operation.

The suggested law reads:

"Any ball delivered which, in the opinion of the umpire at the bowler's end, is bowled at a batsman with intent to intimidate or injure him, shall be considered unfair and 'no ball' shall be called and the bowler notified the reason. If the offence is repeated by the same bowler in the same innings he shall be instructed by the umpire to cease bowling and the over be regarded as completed, and such a bowler shall not be permitted to bowl during the innings."

The Board of Control have tentatively suggested the following dates for the 1934 Tests in England.

June 8, First Test at Nottingham. June 22, Second Test at Lords. July 6, Third Test at Leeds. July 20, Fourth Test at Oval. August 18, Fifth Test at Oval to be played to a finish.—Router.

for the World Economic Conference. The subjects which were studied included the development of commercial policies with a view to promoting international trade and the possible methods of co-ordinating Central Bank policies.

RESORT TO ARMS IF NECESSARY

"IT IS USELESS TO NEGOTIATE"

COMPULSION ADVOCATED

Harbin, Apr. 28.

The threat of war between Russia and Japan is growing rapidly. Feeling is running high and is being actively fostered by the Japanese newspapers.

The growing tenacity of feeling in Japan against the U.S.S.R. in the dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway is indicated by a bellicose article in the Japanese official newspaper, The Harbin Times.

Throughout the dispute, the Harbin Times has been actively anti-Soviet.

TO-DAY'S ARTICLE IS HEADED: "It is useless to negotiate with the Soviet" and goes on to declare that new measures must be found to solve the "problem."

The Manchukuo Government must, says the journal, investigate the "illegal acts" of Soviet officials, and the Soviet Government should be compelled to return the C.E.R. rolling-stock which has been "stolen" and taken into Russian territory, even if this means resort to force by Manchukuo.—Router.

A RIDICULOUS ASSUMPTION

(Special to "Telegraph")

(Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received, April 29, 4.10 a.m.)

Buenos Aires, Apr. 28.

Efforts to mediate between Bolivia and Paraguay who are still fighting in the Gran Chaco have met with a sharp rebuff.

The last attempt was a proposal from the neutral governments of the Argentine and Chile that the dispute should be submitted to arbitration for settlement.

The offer is unconditionally rejected by the Bolivian Government in a long Note which suggests resentment at the "interference."

The Note has been addressed to both government and Bolivia declares: "This dilatory solution would favour Paraguay, and for either Bolivia or Paraguay to resort to the good offices of a third party in settlement of a purely private matter would lead to the ridiculous assumption that both were fighting without knowing why!"—Router.

Sombre Speech by Lord Grey

GERMAN EVENTS DEPLORED

London, Apr. 28.

Viscount Grey, who was Foreign Secretary in 1914, reviewed some current world problems with particular reference to the recent events in Germany, in an address to delegates after his re-election to-day as President of Liberal Council.

At the outset, he expressed warm approval of the step taken by the Prime Minister in accepting President Roosevelt's invitation. He was convinced that the co-operation of the United States was one of the most important factors in "pulling the world round."

The meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. MacDonald had been the utmost goodwill, who had a real desire to see the world relieved of its present difficulties.

VERY DEPRESSED.

Referring to Germany, he said he could not help feeling very depressed at what had happened there lately. What would anyone feel if at this moment Germany was as powerfully armed as she was in 1914.

The fate of Europe would be regarded as most insecure. "The great security of peace now is that Germany is not armed and not in a position to go to war."

The whole trend of her policy and the trend of her mentality has been to shock British opinion which after the war was undoubtedly, in many ways, sympathetic to Germany.

"We felt that Germany, though defeated, was a great nation, great in science and music, and some of the great men we honoured were not only Germans but also Jews."

ATTACK ON JEWS.

"Suddenly there comes this attack on the Jews showing that Germany was not prepared to give them even tolerance."

"Our efforts after the war tended to create a peaceful feeling, but to-day the situation has tremendously disappointed public feeling in this country. A few months ago, a speech such as Sir Austen Chamberlain made in the Commons recently, would not have commanded the universal assent it did command. I associate myself with what he said and what the whole House of Commons endorsed. We cannot make concessions or hold out the hand of peace continually unless that gesture is to be reciprocated."

CHANGE OF POLICY?

"The present moment is not one at which we can go on with the same policy we would have pursued in case of Herr Stresemann and Doctor Brüning. We want peace but it seems to me we have come to the point when the British Government must rely upon the League of Nations in standing by public opinion and treating."

AMERICA BACKS BRITAIN

IMPORTANT MOVE IN DISARMAMENT

ADMONITION TO GERMANY

Geneva, Apr. 28.

What are regarded as "the first fruits of the MacDonald-Roosevelt conversations in Washington" were realised to-day at a meeting of the General Commission of the Disarmament Conference.

The United States came out strongly in support of the British Plan outlined by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald during his recent visit to Geneva.

Mr. Norman Davis, the principal American delegate, told the Commission that the United States would join, with others, in resisting any amendments which would upset the balance of the British Plan.

ADMONITION TO GERMANY.

This is regarded as tantamount to American acceptance of the primary details of the Plan, thus indicating that the Washington talks advanced further than the official communications would have led the average person to believe.

Mr. Davis's announcement is interpreted, moreover, as an admonition to Germany that any attempt to upset the balance of the Plan will not be tolerated and that the United States Government is determined to oppose any rearmament by Germany.

GERMAN BOMB SHELL.

Meanwhile, German amendment were submitted to-day suggesting, inter alia, an extension of the prohibitions and the destruction of defensive weapons, showing that Germany is most determined in her demand for equality.

M. Massigli (France) criticised the amendment as practically destroying the British proposals, while Captain Anthony Eden, the principal British delegate, expressed astonishment and perturbation.

He expressed the hope that the amendment was not Germany's last word.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, Captain Eden and Herr Nodolny, Germany, will meet privately to-morrow to try and solve the difficulties.—Router.

GERMANY'S DEMAND.

London, Apr. 27.

In the General Commission of the Disarmament Conference Geneva this afternoon, German amendments to the British draft convention were presented declaring that the attainment of equality

LOVE or MONEY?

BY H. W. CORLEY.

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONA MORAN, receptionist in a Wall Street law office, is surprised when her childhood sweetheart, STEVE SACARELLI, returns to New York after three years of mysterious absence. Mona contributes largely to the support of her mother, invalid father, sister, KITTY, and her do-well brother, BUD. Steve has been in South America where, largely by chance, he has become associated with DAVID TOWNSEND, rich and socially prominent, who owns a diamond mine. Together they have made the mine, believed worthless, pay handsomely. Steve owns a huge diamond called "The Empress of Peru."

CHAPTER XVI

The first weeks of spring passed swiftly. Bud's contributions to the household finances began to arrive regularly, putting the flat on a much more comfortable basis. Ma had devised an agreeable fiction concerning her son's new job in Connecticut. She even spoke of the girl he was interested in. Later she announced to her neighbours that Bud's employer had sent him south on a business trip.

"He's working for one of them big Wall Street men," Ma confided to Mrs. Callahan. "Thanks the world of Bud, too, he does."

Kitty was easily consoled over the absence of her brother who had been chief opponent in many a battle across the dinner table. She was delighted now to have a room of her own. Knowing that her school friends would not, upon Bud's arrival, be rudely hustled out of his favourite chair, Kitty took to inviting Isabel and Kathleen to come home with her. She and her friends could play the radio as much as they wished and Ma would never object.

Moreover a brother "down south" gave Kitty a certain prestige among her friends. Ma packed Bud's scant wardrobe and asked Steve to forward it to him. "But we've already sent word to have Bud completely outfitted," Steve told her. "He won't need these things."

"The lad left without so much as a toothbrush on him. Poor boy!" Ma lamented. "Seems to me you put on a lot of airs for life in the jungle."

Mona suggested when Steve mentioned some of the items of Bud's newly ordered wardrobe. "Why not? In the army the men used to shave and make themselves spic-and-span to go over the top, didn't they? We live in a jungle—though we don't call it that—but we make ourselves comfortable there. Have lots of servants. Barry and I always dress for dinner. We send to Haiti for clothing. And you should see the island we have in the Caribbean for holidays! When we're there we get linen suits from Haiti. We learned about the tailor from the captain of a cruiser. Our orders go over by one mail boat and the suits come back on the return trip. Tailored to measure, too."

"Just as I'd shop in Herald Square if I lived on Long Island!" Mona exclaimed. "Herald Square? Say—you'd shop on Fifty-seventh street or Madison!"

They laughed together as if their talk was the most amusing in the world.

"Barry wanted me to ask if you and Lottie can't come up to Twilands for Sunday. He's going Friday and I can drive you and Lottie up Sunday morning if you'll come. We'd have a great time together!"

"I'd love it!" Mona agreed, accepting for Lottie as well as herself. She knew that Lottie would be only too glad to throw over any other date she might have for such an invitation.

"Barry's uncle is out of town," Steve volunteered as if in answer to unspoken questions.

Mona smiled. "Yes, I know. He's at White Sulphur with Mr. Garretson. They're friends, you know." She stopped rather suddenly. Mona had just remembered that she and Barry had never mentioned to Steve the fact that they had met before Steve's introduction.

"So Garretson knows old Townsend, eh?" Steve said, without suspicion. "Well, we can thank him for this day's invitation. It certainly wouldn't be much fun to visit Twilands if the old man were around."

"Don't he and Barry get along together?"

"Get along?" Steve eyed her. "Oh, no-so! It isn't the old man's fault, I suppose. It's his imagination. He thinks—well, it's not exactly his imagination either. He's taking out on Barry the ill feelings he had for Barry's father and mother. Making their son pay what he owed them."

"Owed them?" Mona queried. "Well, they played a rather mean trick on him, you must admit."

"But that's not Barry's fault." "Of course not. But his uncle can't forget it. That's the way of the world, my child."

It was agreed a little later that Steve should call for the two girls at about 10 o'clock Sunday morning, stopping first for Mona and then for Lottie.

"And if she's not ready we won't wait for her!" Steve had insisted. It was rather well known that punctuality was one of the virtues almost entirely foreign to Lottie.

The Morans were awake early Sunday morning. Kitty was to go to spend the day at Alice's as usual. Ma was making her weekly trip to the hospital to see her husband.

Kitty eyed her older sister rather approvingly. "You and Steve certainly make a nice-looking couple," she announced.

"You and Isabel have decided that, have you?" Mona returned.

Ma interrupted the conversation, calling Kitty into the kitchen. A chicken for Dad was all ready roasting in the oven and fragrant hints of the bird's tenderness filled the air. Kitty was far from being in accord with arrangements for the day. She said the kids in Alice's neighbourhood were "dumb." She would have to wheel the baby for an hour before she could settle down with the newspaper comic section. Kitty wanted to go to the hospital with her mother to see Dad.

"Children aren't allowed and you know that, Kathleen Moran." Thus Ma disposes of the appeal briefly. "The doctors say, though, that Dad's getting better. Glory be to God!"

A few more tugs at her over-shoes and Kitty was ready to go. She departed with remarks indicating that she found these visits to Alice's flat less and less agreeable.

Ma drew a basket from the closet and packed it lovingly. The baked chicken, fresh rolls, currant jelly. Dad's illness was such that his weekly basket might contain almost anything—within realms of discretion—that they cared to pack.

"Give Father a big kiss for me," Mona called to her mother. "Tell him I'll be up to see him Tuesday."

Steve had already telephoned that he was on his way. Mona had answered his call gaily.

She stood before the mirror in her bedroom, touching her cheeks with rouge, then powder, with the utmost care. She brightened her lips with lipstick, pressed her hair into dark, becoming waves about her face and added the faintest dash of perfume to her ear lobes. Then she drew a smart little blue sport frock over her head and settled it into place. The blue hat—the same shade as the dress—was adjusted at just the right, jaunty angle.

Mona stepped back from the mirror for a final survey of her costume. Yes, she was satisfied. The blue frock brought out the colour of her eyes. Its trim lines revealed—quite modestly—the slender, graceful figure. Mona knew that she was as becomingly and suitably dressed for the holiday in the country as any of Barry's debutante friends might have been.

The girl's eyes were shining. It was the radiant glow of happiness, more than the blue gown, the cosmetics, the painstaking minutes before the dressing table that made Mona Moran on that spring morning a real beauty.

Steve was coming for her. Steve was looking forward to the long drive into the country with Mona. But they were not thoughts of Steve Sacarelli that brought the flush of colour to the girl's cheeks.

Mona went to the living room window and looked down on the street to watch for Steve's long gleaming motor car. It should be there any moment now. Steve had had time enough to travel the 10 blocks even in the worst of Sunday morning traffic jams.

The hands of the clock across the room pointed to 10 minutes past 10.

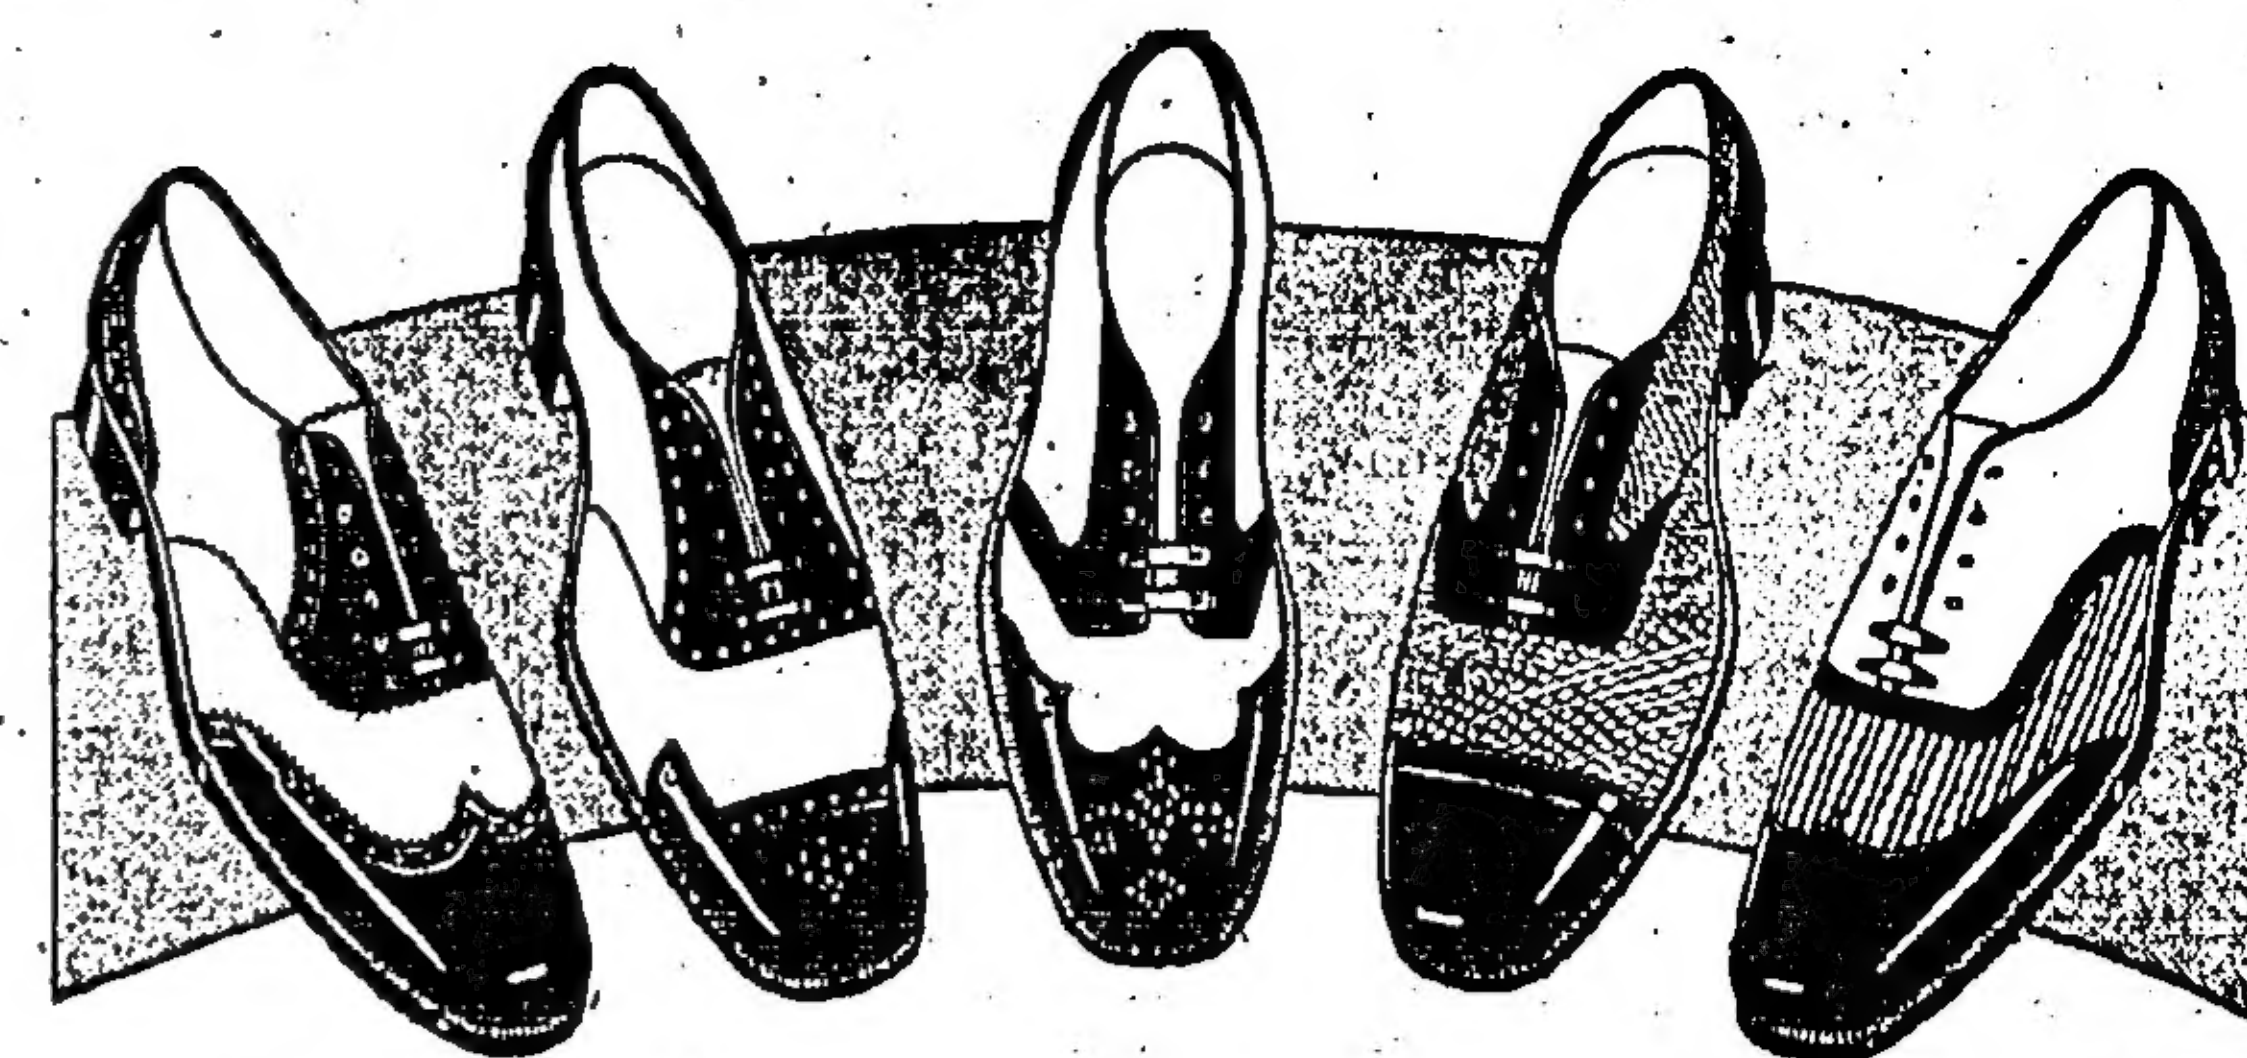

"What can be keeping him?" Mona thought. "If he isn't here in a few minutes we'll be late."

She could not bear to lose even 10 minutes of the day at Twilands. Mona was eager to see the beautiful Townsend estate—the home Barry had known as a child.

"I'm going to have a whole day with him!" Mona's heart was singing. "One whole day!" I'm going to be a guest in his home!" Suddenly the blue eyes darkened. She was remembering that Steve Sacarelli had been her childhood playmate. Mona understood Steve, knew that he cared for her and accepted this affection in a matter-of-fact way.

Barry Townsend, in spite of all his protestations, was from a different world. How could she know if Barry's feeling toward her was friendship or something deeper? How could she know if Barry was learning to care as she had learned? "Perhaps," Mona thought with a quick intake of breath, "today will tell me!"

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done: 2,100,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports: A defeat by the Senate of the "Soldier Bonus" amendment caused a sweeping rally in stocks after an early decline. Traders were very anxious to buy, and shorts rushed to cover, believing that the way is now clear for the adoption of inflation.

A Cable Received from the New York Office says: "Understand United States Steel Corporation operating 30% of capacity."

EARTH'S JIG-SAW PUZZLE

WHEN ENGLAND WAS A SWAMP

It has often been pointed out that if you could bring the Continents of North and South America backwards towards the east they would fit into the Continents of Europe and Africa as one part of a Jigsaw puzzle fits into another.

Have they, in fact, ever fitted into each other and been torn asunder? Can they ever have done so, seeing that the great Atlantic Ocean lies between?

It really seems an idea too bizarre and "shocking," as some geologists call it; and yet there are an increasing number of experts who think that it must be seriously entertained and that it gives a sound theory of mountain building.

The theory has been worked out independently by the American geologist, Taylor, and the German meteorologist, Wegener; the latter scientist unfortunately lost his life last year in an Arctic expedition.

Taylor and Wegener contend that the mountain chains of our earth have been formed by the horizontal crushing together of the prism-like forms of material laid down by weather and sea erosion through the slow migration of the continents.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS SIDESLIP.

For example, the chain of the Rocky Mountains was formed by the slipping in a westerly direction of all North America away from Europe—a slipping for hundreds of miles. This migration of the American continent took place under the direction of a force so powerful that the strata of the Rocky Mountains were crumpled and thrust into a mountain turmoil—first crumpled into a mountain mass and then that mass thrust up into the heights.

The American geologist, Daly, explains the force as the weight of the continents slithering down to the west as in a landslide. Long ago when the earth was very young, its crust was thin because the earth was hotter than now, and its thin crust was therefore weak. Strong forces acted on this weak crust, giving effects of distortion beyond compare, and thus was formed the immense structure which is the oldest mountain structure of all. It is called by some the Basement Complex and it composes most of the continental plateaus and that to the depth of many miles; it underlies and wears through all the mountain ranges and valleys that we know to-day.

ALL ONE CONTINENT.

Large parts of the ancient basement complex (when all the continents were one continent, or nearly so), have always been free from strong folding or crushing (such as forms our mountains), and these were stiffened long ago and remain specially unyielding regions of the earth's crust. From very early times they have tended to persist parts are called "shields" since they are land structures.

In such past ages as showed all ice as melted, all seas as large seas, and when much of the continents we know were levelled and under a thin veneer of sea water, these "shields" remained high and dry.

It is interesting to note that when nearly all of France, and Spain, Germany, Prussia, Poland, Czechoslovakia and South Russia, and all of Italy, England and Scotland were shallow seas, or at least swamps, even then a little bit of Wales and all of Ireland (except the counties of Down and Antrim), Iceland, Greenland and Canada remained standing in the water certainly, but all well out of the water.

GREENLAND'S ICY MOUNTAINS.

Only within the last year Dr. Knudsen has found that in the interval of a few years since last their longitudes were taken, the west coast of Greenland has moved 60 feet in the westerly direction, whilst in the same time the west coast of Denmark has only moved 3 feet, so even now it would seem that the Atlantic continues, appreciably, to enlarge.

THE ATLANTIC FLOOR.

From time to time there are sinkings in the floor of the Atlantic at places, and therefore earthquakes, though Atlantic seaboard earthquakes cannot compare in violence with those on the Pacific coasts, or in the mountain belt Europe and Asia north of the equator.

Perhaps even the little earthquake of January 14 in the Irwell valley may have been due to some such cause, though it is more likely to owe its origin to the fact that that region of England lies on a fault lying on a line between the volcanoes of Hekla and Etna.

Germ Acid

... THE CAUSE OF DECAY

The toothbrush cannot remove all food particles hidden in the crevices at the Danger Line—where teeth meet gums. They ferment, Germ Acid forms and decay results. Squibb Dental Cream counteracts this acid, however, as it contains Squibb Milk of Magnesia, an effective antacid. Squibb's protects teeth and cleans them. It is a perfectly safe dentifrice and very economical.

WEDDING MARCH
AT FUNERALMR. LANSBURY'S
HYMNS OF LOVE

Crowds of people who had waited for hours in the streets of Bow paid their last homage to Mrs. Lansbury, wife of Mr. George Lansbury, M.P. (Leader of the Opposition), as her funeral cortege passed from the house to Bow Parish Church.

The service in church was totally different from that of an ordinary funeral. In place of the usual sad hymns and prayers, Mr. Lansbury had selected hymns breathing the spirit of love in memory of the woman who, as he described her, had been "my" sweetheart for sixty years.

"Oh perfect love, all human thought transcending," and "The day Thou gavest, Lord, is ended," were the hymns of Mr. Lansbury's choice.

MR. LANSBURY'S REQUEST. No mournful strains of the Dead March greeted him and his family when they arrived at the church. Instead, the organist played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. This, like the hymns of love, was also by Mr. Lansbury's special request.

When the short service ended the organ again thundered a note of hope and triumph. This time it was the "Hallelujah Chorus," Mrs. Lansbury's favourite music.

Crowds ten deep lined each footpath, and every head was bared as Mr. Lansbury stepped into the first of 20 cars which conveyed him and the mourners to Ilford, where he cremation took place.

"SHE IS BESIDE ME STILL." "When my dear wife died I almost felt like giving up, but it would be letting her down if I were to break off now what she so nobly upheld—the fight for an ideal which has been before us all our lives and made living worth while."

"My wife is beside me still, and I know that she would wish me to go on striving alone as we used to strive together."

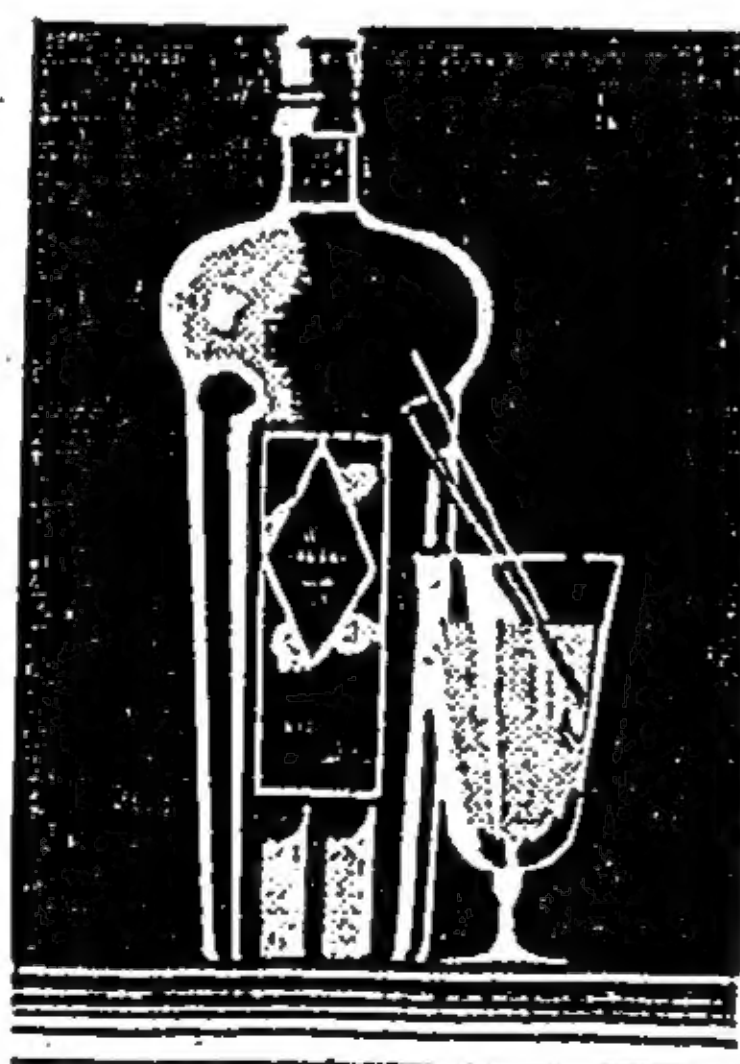

"We will still go on together, her spirit urging me on."

MECHANICAL FISH
DETECTORHOPES FROM A NEW DEVICE
FOR TAKING SOUNDINGS

A remarkable device, which not only gives the depth of water under a ship and the nature of the bed of the sea, but may ultimately be able to report the presence of particular kinds of fish in the neighbourhood of the ship, was referred to at the annual meeting, in London, of the Marconi International Marine Communication Company.

Mr. F. S. Hayburn, the Chairman, said that the device, known as the Echometer, was manufactured by a subsidiary company, and was used by British trawlers. It embodied an optical system for indicating the depth of water under a ship. It was extremely simple in operation and could be manipulated by any member of the ship's crew.

Soundings could be obtained instantaneously by pressing a button. The presence of this gear on board ship undoubtedly encouraged the taking of soundings frequently, even during the most adverse weather conditions, particularly as no preparation was necessary, nor was there any need to reduce the speed of the vessel when sounding.

NORTH MANCHURIA WAR CLOUDS

War clouds are thickening in the region of North Manchuria. Both parties to the dispute are moving troops as a precautionary measure and while it might be safe to say that neither Russia nor Japan is really desirous of precipitating a clash, tempers are short and there is a tendency to see certain ominous facts as irremediable and decisive. That is the mood which breeds war. Japan sees a threat in the presence of Soviet troops on the Manchurian border, carrying out demonstrative manoeuvres of the type employed Chang Haichiang in 1929 and after, and embarks upon a re-disposition of her forces in Manchuria and Jehol to meet the new "menace." The explanation of the Tokyo War Office for the sudden termination of the Luan Ho operations is palpably thin. The movement of troops from Jehol into North Manchuria can no longer be concealed. If the Japanese believe that Jehol and Chinese hostility can be left to look after themselves while the C.E.R. crisis develops or fizzles out, their wisdom cannot be gainsaid. But the significance of the move has not been lost. The result is to be found in a dangerous rise of tension which has begun to arouse serious talk of war. There seems real reason to fear that Russia and Japan are drifting in the rapid and under such conditions that rescue efforts must come swiftly if they are to be successful. The outcome is largely a question of intangibilities. Explosive material is contained in Manchukuo's plan of action on the expiry of the ultimatum setting May 12 as the date for the return of certain locomotives taken into Soviet territory. The Soviet has consistently refused to budge from its original stand that the locomotives are the property of the Soviet Government, loaned to the Chinese Eastern Railway. At this stage, Moscow is not likely to move under threat. On the contrary, the most is being made of an allegation that Japanese officials in Harbin have formulated plans for the seizure of the railway. "Alarm" is shouted in Moscow along lines which look dangerously like an effort to arouse public opinion, to prepare the Russian people for all possible eventualities. Manchukuo, with Japan's knowledge and consent (it cannot be otherwise) also presents a bold front. A spokesman of the Japanese Foreign Office declared this week that Japan would not support adherence to existing treaties, that the railway contract must be revised before the dispute is settled. It is not surprising, therefore, to find that the earlier inclination to dismiss successive developments as kite-flying by one party or the other has given way to apprehensions that a conflagration in North Manchuria is drawing near. The whole atmosphere is antipathetic to a peaceful settlement. It is no secret that the General Staff in Tokyo take the view that a war with Russia in the not distant future is inevitable. Russia, too, has been deeply suspicious since the moment of Japan's refusal to conclude a Non-Aggression Pact. Potentialities for war, in these circumstances, may depend as much upon whether one of the party is ready in a military sense as upon the climax to the Chinese Eastern Railway controversy. The mood is more important than the causes.

Why Not Scrap History?

Father Byrne's attack on the present day teaching of history to the young will, on general grounds, be applauded by the majority of those who bear any recollection of the Great War and consequently realise the utter futility of the school manuals. An educationalist of no little standing, Father Byrne's observations on education bears examination. He asserts that the school history books are harmful because they emphasise the glories of war and of winning battles. He further suggests that the child of to-day should be brought up to date in his history lessons, not only imbued with the real lessons of current history, but taught what one might expect the world to be in 25 years' time. Both points are worthy of consideration. On the other hand, is it possible to teach history in any form without children suffering the reactions which supporters of the League of Nations and the various Peace groups deplore, and which Father Byrne rightly points out is harmful in effect? We think that possibly the only manual to accomplish this is something on the lines of W.C. Sellar's and K.M. Yeatman's brilliant satire "1066 And All That". In other words would it not be more advantageous to scrap history in our educational curriculum and concentrate more on giving the young people a working knowledge of the fundamentals of economics and politics? Let them see that war is uneconomical, that it prevents them from getting their bread and butter, reduces wages to a scale where living becomes merely an awful existence, and which renders industry bankrupt. Teach the children how to interpret and apply economics, and let them begin in their early lives to work out for themselves real and false values.

Words! Words! Words!

In a recent address on the world situation, Dr. Albert Einstein dwelt more than briefly on the necessity of the removal of the "obstacle of the taboo." That obstacle, he explained, lies in words and other symbols which are laden with emotion; an emotion calculated to drive out all reason, and with it any dispassionate understanding of world needs. Dr. Einstein drew attention to the danger of an indiscriminating acceptance of words, where that acceptance is based only on an emotional atmosphere surrounding them—words which become shibboleths of prejudice and narrow zeal. As examples the learned Doctor advanced "prestige, fatherland, etc." in the sense in which these words are used in most countries. Prestige seems an excellent example of the acceptance which Dr. Einstein attacks. Individuals and nations set great store by their prestige, thinking rather proudly of the term as denoting a peculiar standing or attainment. When we turn to the dispassionate aid of a dictionary, and learn that the original meaning of the word was delusion or illusion, such as the legend of the jugglers, we get a revised impression of the importance of our worldly status as nations or individuals.

THE UNEMPLOYED AT THE ROUND TABLE

By REV. E. L. ALLEN, D.P.H.

"This," said my guide as he opened the door, "this is our chapel, where the Order of the Round Table meets." I looked at him in amazement. He was an unemployed miner, he had been 'on the dole' for five or six years, and I suppose, for five or six years, and I would quite probably remain on it for the rest of his life. Yet there, sure enough, was a chapel, beautiful in its simplicity, a work of love and reverence as well as of good taste. Yeast and in the corner, too, a round table was to be seen! I was standing in the Community House at Treglaw, and my guide was the caretaker of the building, 'The Order of the Round Table'.

I asked, "What do you mean by that?" He told me, and I listened to the story of a heroic struggle against odds, against depression in men's minds, where it is more terrible even than in the world economic situation. The Rhonda Valley in South Wales is one of those spots which God made beautiful only to see man do his best to make it ugly afterwards. Village runs into village, town into town; names change, but you have no consciousness of passing from one place to another as you ride along what looks like one continuous road in the dingy trams which are the main mode of conveyance there. Back from the road, black, dismal slagheaps overhang the houses, fit symbols of the poverty which is for ever impending over the people themselves in these days. Men lounge at street-corners, beaten by that desperate problem of 'genuinely seeking work' which everyone knows there is no work to be sought. Little wonder that in parts of that valley are spoken of as hot-beds of Communism. If you or I lived in those dark houses in those forbidding surroundings, we might be sorely tempted to paint the landscape red by way of a change!

BARKER OF TONYPANDY.

Into that valley a few years ago came one who was to be known in it as Barker of Tonypany. Appointed to the Wesleyan Central Hall in that town, he threw himself with all his native energy into the work of relieving the monotony of life for some at least of those who were condemned to the fruitless leisure of unemployment. The rooms attached to the Hall were thrown open for purposes of recreation throughout the week, and a stage was erected for which he painted the scenery himself and on which dramatic performances were given by amateur companies which he had trained. But he saw that what these men wanted was not recreation but work, not charity but self-help. He gathered round him a group of men who, themselves unemployed, were eager to find means of serving those who were in the same position.

With financial assistance from some who heard of the scheme and were attracted by it, these men secured a house by the roadside at Treglaw and made of it the community centre which I was visiting. I passed from the library into the class-room for the use of the Worker's Educational Association, the furniture throughout having been made by unemployed men themselves. From there I passed to the open-air theatre at the back, modelled on that at Oberammergau, and so to the gymnasium and the workshop. Any man could drop into that workshop and handle tools for a few hours, making some article which would be of value to himself, his home, or the settlement. He would get nothing for it, to be sure, except the satisfaction of having once more set his hand to some work that was worth while.

ORDER OF THE ROUND TABLE.

But those who were most active in the work felt that something more was needed, and they accepted gladly the young minister's suggestion that they should go into camp with him to think over their whole effort and whither it would lead them. They came back from the camp with the vision of a new Order of the Round Table, which should recruit its knights from the ranks of the unemployed, and they would themselves begin it!

The world in which we live has ample opportunities for those who will to ride abroad redressing human wrongs, even if one takes a railway train instead of a horse and even if one's weapons are only a joiner's tools. So these men set apart a room in their Community House for a chapel, furnishing and decorating it themselves, and around that table they gathered, a new order of chivalry, knights in workmen's jackets and with the unexpended portion of the week's 'dole' in their pockets.

In the top of their round table there is a circle of rings, as though so many tiny egg-cups had been let into the surface. I asked for and received the explanation. A candle is lit on the communion table when the simple ceremony of dedication or initiation is held. Each man takes his vow to serve God in the service of his fellows, and as he does so he rises from his place, lights a candle of his own from that beside the Cross and sets it in its place on the table. It is a sign of what he is pledging himself to do, to take the light and fire of the Cross in simple, practical ways among those who share with him in common need.

HOW LONG WILL OUR WORLD LAST?

By R. W. HALLOWS

Many of the world's most famous astronomers are convinced that the universe, the giant family to which the sun and this world of ours belong, is expanding so rapidly that it might almost be said to be exploding. It is growing in size like an immense soap-bubble, and some day the bubble must burst. That is not likely to happen for a very long while, and so far as science can predict the world has millions of years of existence ahead of it yet. After all, it has lasted for a vast span of time already, for the world was very old before the first primitive man made his appearance upon its surface.

There are several ways of discovering the age of the world. The seas were once fresh water; all the salt that they contain has been washed out of the land and carried down to them by rivers. The weight of the salt in the seas being known, it is not difficult to discover how long the rivers must have taken to collect it and bring it down.

Radium and uranium, which turn in the course of ages into lead of particular kinds, furnish other clues.

The reason why it is believed that the universe is expanding is that (Continued on Page 9.)

It is said that mosquitoes are ten thousand times worse on the Peak this year. We understand, however, that they are not solely responsible for the odd spots!

Mr. Wynne-Jones expressed doubt the other day whether the word elevator is used in English. Quite right. You may offer a man a lift but you wouldn't offer him an elevator!

The famous painting "September Morn" is missing. Last seen in Russia. It showed a lady bathing. Probably destroyed for sabotage.

We hope President Roosevelt gets the currency situation cleared up very soon so that we can get down to something important like the Derby prospects.

A number of Kowloon housewives are reported to be economising by doing their own cooking. This is certainly one method of getting their husbands to eat less.

Statisticians have been busy ever since it was announced that a lemon 18 inches in circumference had been grown in a greenhouse. They estimate it would make six pies or lemonade for a crowd of 10,000.

The height of something or other, so far as we can judge, is contained in the case of the Chicago man who was arrested for cashing a bad cheque during the bank holiday.

Some of our local songsters who take liberties with the upper register would not be nearly as bad on the high C's!

Experiments have been carried out in the Sahara with a view to making use of the power in sunlight. As the sunburnt flapper remarked—"Oasis me!"

There is some talk of forming a Hongkong Australian Society. Doubtless for the sake of Auld Slang Tyme!

She was only a weight-reducer's daughter—but oh, how she put on size!

"Hitler Cabinet Split"—A Glumy outlook!

We are now able to publish the true story concerning the three revellers who dived into the harbour from Blake Pier at 2 a.m. on the morning of the 27th. Instant. One thought the lifebelt was a lemon, and the other two gave the lemonade!

It appears as though clouds have a silver lining after all!

News Item—"The brewers expect that the flow of beer to America across the Pacific will continue for two years." We trust this will not cause undue rolling.

A writer states that women motorists invariably sound their horns unnecessarily. We always thought that men were more liable to go on the foot!

Thanks to the vehicular ferry, it is anticipated that Kowloon motorists will occasionally descend to ascend the Peak.

A convivial party returning from Repulse Bay the other night operated a gramophone in the car en route. Possibly they were out to break a record!

If this silver-gold party only meant pros-parity!

June debt instalment must be paid. Edward Kelly says he always receives those little reminders on June 30.

Rumour has it that Charlie Chaplin, who has already married twice, will shortly marry again. A busy life for Chaplin's chaplain.

Edward Kelly says his wife drove him to drink. Most of us have to walk to it.

FIERCE BATTLE

HOSTILITIES RESUME AT NANTIENTMEN

Peking, Apr. 28. Chinese reports state that fighting broke out this morning at Nantientmen. Japanese reinforcements are making a strong bid to capture Nantientmen, but at present they are being held off. Japanese claims of the capture of Nantientmen are discredited.—Reuter.

Japan's Hopes.

Tokyo, Apr. 28. A War Office spokesman has confirmed the reports that the Chinese forces re-entered the evacuated area as soon as the Japanese troops withdrew.

He added that the Chinese troops seemingly did not intend to resume fighting, consequently the Japanese were leaving them alone. The Japanese, however, were prepared to expel them again with force if they showed signs of renewing hostilities.

Around Nantientmen, and to the southward of Keppelkow, he said, further fighting is anticipated, as the Chinese troops in that area are Chiang Kai-shek's, and have not yet realised the futility of continuing the operations.

The War Office spokesman appeared satisfied, however, that the Japanese would be able to disperse them before long without having to advance far within the Great Wall.—Reuter Special.

Chinese Advance.

Peking, Apr. 27. Chinese troops have advanced beyond Changli and occupied Changchiang and Lunging further northward following on the retreat of the Japanese.

The Manchukuo troops in the Lunging area are reported to be continuing their retreat. Cars and mules were commandeered in great numbers from the peasants in the Lunging and Linzu districts to convey the withdrawing force.

The vanguards of the advancing Chinese army are reported to be near Lunging and Lunging, which points, according to intelligence reports, the Japanese have no intention to hold. The Chinese, however, are exercising caution in their advance, fearing a possible trap.

The leading generals operating in the northern front arrived here yesterday to attend the military conference specially called by General Ho Ying-ching, discuss the situation arising of the sudden Japanese evacuation. Among those present were General Soong Chih-yuan, General Sheng Cheng, General Ku Tso-yi and General Yu Hsueh-chung.—Canton Daily Sun.

The Kupeikow Front.

Peking, Apr. 27. Till a late hour last night the Chinese troops were still holding Nantientmen, in spite of all Japanese attacks. The Chinese troops are fighting under the personal direction of General Hsu Ting-yao, one of Chiang Kai-shek's Lieutenants.

The Chinese appear to have dug themselves well in so as to lessen the effect of the terrific Japanese aerial and artillery bombardment. While they have so far dealt successfully with all infantry attacks though at a terrific cost, 4,000 casualties being reported, of which 500 wounded men have already arrived here.

Chinese reports state that many Manchukuo troops are assisting the Japanese at Kupeikow and they claim that the opposing forces total 30,000 officers and men.—Reuter.

CANTON CRASHES

TWO GOVERNMENT PLANES MEET DISASTER

Canton, Apr. 28. In unfavourable weather conditions, two Government aeroplanes crashed this morning, a Government pilot was killed and another seriously injured. The two incidents occurred within an hour.

The first happened when a graduate of the seventh term of the Government Aviation School, Tai Nai Hung, took out a bombing machine for his morning exercise. While flying over the Shaukaling aerodrome he crashed from an altitude of about 600 feet. The plane was badly smashed and the pilot died in the Chungshan University Hospital.

While the aerodrome officials were attending him a telephone message was received for medical assistance because a second aeroplane piloted by Ng Chung-hang, also a new government graduate, met with a similar accident. The plane was also badly demolished. The injured pilot when taken to the Chungshan Hospital was found to be in a bad state, although the doctors expressed opinion that he would live.—Kenah.

FOURTH OF MAY

STUDENTS AT PEKING TO CELEBRATE

Peking, Apr. 28. Students of the Peking National University are busily making preparations to commemorate the fourteenth anniversary of the so-called May the fourth student movement.

On May 1919, students of this University staged a demonstration against the award of Shantung to Japan at the Versailles Peace Conference. After parading through the principal streets, the students wrecked the residence of Tsoo Jui-lin on the ground that he and two others were responsible for the Government's alleged pro-Japanese policy. A number of students were arrested, this resulting in a student strike.

The next morning the movement spread like wildfire to other cities and soon the whole nation had joined in the demand that the Chinese Government instruct its delegates in Paris not to sign the Peace Treaty.

The Government agreed and since then May 4 has always been celebrated by the students as a national holiday.—Reuter's Special.

The sporting gun found alongside his body had been discharged by a string and the bullet had shattered the base of the skull and the brain.

Just before the suicide, Mr. Justice McCordie had been reading the newspapers. He left no writing of a suicidal nature.—Reuter.

HOW LONG WILL OUR WORLD LAST?

many of the galaxies of stars situated in the farthest depths of space to which the biggest telescopes can pierce seem to be rushing away from us at almost incredible speeds. So distant are these galaxies that though each contains thousands of millions of stars they appear as mere faint points of light when seen through a giant telescope. Though light travels continually at the dizzy speed of 186,000 miles a second, it takes no less than 150,000,000 years to reach us from the most distant of these star-families.

How do we know that the very distant stars and star-families are running away from us?

When very distant stars are examined through the spectroscopic, an instrument which enables the "pitch" of their light to be measured, it is found that there is a very pronounced reddening. In other words, these stars appear to be travelling away from us, and speeds up to 15,000 miles a second have been worked out. If these speeds were correct it would not be untrue to say that the universe was to all intents and purposes exploding rather than existing.

It is quite possible that in the course of its long journey from the most distant star-families to us light becomes fatigued. The reddening may be due not to an outward rush of the most distant stars and star-families, but to a slowing down of light waves after a journey of millions of years.

Another possibility is that the universe, so far from expanding continually, grows in size for a certain time and then starts to contract. It may behave rather like a concertina, extending itself for a long period of years, then being drawn inwards, and then extending again.

No one can say at the present time which of these views is the right one. We see the most distant of the star-families not as they are, but as they were ages ago. Had they ceased to run away from us and were now approaching us we should know nothing of the fact for millions of years to come.

AMERICA BACKS BRITAIN

should receive practical application in the convention, Germany being allowed all the weapons considered necessary to the defence of other nations.

Mr. Norman Davis urged that the British plan be adopted, as whole. The United States regarded the British plan as a valuable contribution to the work of disarmament in providing a scheme to be followed in progressive steps until arms were brought down to the level all desired.

AMERICA'S POSITION.

Although the plan contained provisions unsuitable for the United States, its merits outweighed its defects. Efforts should be directed to adoption of the plan as a whole without making modifications jeopardising its balance. United States delegation would therefore resist anything unduly weakening the plan or jeopardising the success of the conference.

CONSULTATIVE PACT.

Mr. Arthur Henderson warned the delegates that rapid progress, especially in the disarmament chapters of the MacDonald convention, was essential to the World Economic Conference. The Commission accepted the American suggestion to proceed to disarmament, postponing further discussion of the security question until the Washington position towards the consultative pact is defined.—British Wireless.

CABINET AND HARD-HIT DISTRICTS

REPLY TO AN M.P. DEPUTATION

An assurance that the Government is giving anxious attention to the question of State assistance to the able-bodied unemployed and of removing transitional benefit anomalies, was given by Sir Henry Betterton, the Minister of Labour, to a deputation of M.P.s representing the distressed areas.

The deputation urged that the State should maintain all able-bodied unemployed under the age of 65, that present anomalies in the scale of transitional benefit as between one area and another should be abolished, and that the scale should be uniform with the addition of rent and cost of living allowances appropriate to the locality.

PREMIER MISUNDERSTANDING.

Sir Nicholas Gratian Doyle, the spokesman, explained that there was a misunderstanding about the Prime Minister's reply to the deputation. It was not true that the Prime Minister had declined to see the deputation. He had asked that in the first place the responsible Ministers should hear the views of the members and report to the Prime Minister fully. The matter would then receive his consideration.

It is understood that Sir Robert Aske and other speakers impressed on the Minister of Labour the urgency of dealing with the growing burden of local rates.

Sir Henry Betterton replied that while he agreed that the growth of rates was becoming a burden it must not be forgotten that national taxation had grown during the last five or six years from £12,000,000 to nearly £70,000,000 in respect of unemployment relief. During the same period there had been an actual decline, by a small percentage, of rates raised for the same purpose.

Sir E. Hilton Young, the Minister of Health, asked the deputation a number of questions about the proposal that the administration of transitional benefit should be placed in the hands of a national authority in order to secure uniformity.

The Minister said that it had always been a well-known principle of local government in this country that an area where a rate was collected should be the area for determining claims on the product of that rate and that the same authority should have power to determine how it should be spent.

GREAT CUP FINAL ANTICIPATED TO-DAY

EVERTON V THE CITY

MANCHESTER'S THIRD FINAL

BOTH TEAMS HAVE PREVIOUS WINS

Everton and Manchester City meet at Wembley in the final of the Football Association Challenge Cup competition this afternoon.

Everton will probably start slight favourites, although the City have the more imposing record in their advance to the final.

The pitch is in excellent condition, and elaborate arrangements have been made to handle the vast crowd which will not number less than 90,000. The engagement of 400 turnstile men and 5,000 of the catering staff, while six doctors, 12 nurses and 100 ambulances will be ready, indicate how complete are the arrangements.

In order to avoid confusion, the club colours of the teams being similar, Everton will don white jerseys and black shorts, and Manchester City will be in scarlet shirts and white shorts.

For the first time in the history of the competition, identification of the players will be made from numbers on their backs.

The teams expect to line up as follows:

EVERTON.

Sagar, Cook and Cresswell; Britton, White and Thomson; Geldard, Dunn, Dean, Johnson and Stein.

MANCHESTER CITY.

Langford; Cann and Dale; Busby, Cowan and Bray; Tooleland, Marshall, Tilson (or Herd), McMillan and Brook.

The progress of the teams to the final this year is set out below:

EVERTON.

beat Leicester 3-2 (away)
Bury 3-1 (home)
Leeds 2-0 (home)
Luton 6-0 (home)
West Ham 2-1 (at Wolverhampton)

MANCHESTER CITY.

beat Gateshead 9-0 (home) after draw of

1-1 at Gateshead
Walsall 2-0 (home)
Bolton 4-2 (away)
Burnley 1-0 (away)
Borby 3-2 (at Huddersfield)

PREVIOUS SUCCESSES.

This will be Everton's fifth appearance in the Cup final, and Manchester City's third. Both have won the trophy once, Everton beating Newcastle in 1905-6 by one-nil and the same score.

Everton first appeared in the final in 1892, when they lost to Wolverhampton Wanderers by 1-0. In 1896 they lost to Aston Villa in the last stage by the odd goal in five. Then came their first success and the following year 1906-7, they entered the final, but were beaten by Sheffield Wednesday 2-1.

Twenty-two years elapsed between Manchester's first and second final, City beating Bolton in 1903 by the City last opposing Bolton Wanderers in 1925, when they lost by the only goal scored.

5 MINUTES OF FOOTBALL.

The Art of Shooting Low

(By "Saracen")

Occasionally you see a player fail to score when it seems easier to put the ball into the net than outside. It sometimes happens that a man kicks the ball over the bar when standing almost underneath it and it is amazing that he should blunder so grievously.

But most of these mistakes may be explained. In the case I have mentioned it is probable that the player kicks a fraction of a second late. That is to say instead of meeting the ball on the half volley it has come off the ground an inch or so and in he circumstances his foot goes right under it. Hence the quick rise.

It is possible, too, that the player at the moment of shooting was not properly balanced. If kicking with his right foot, his weight was too far back on the left. In shooting the weight ought always to be well forward. That is the way to keep the ball down. The player, as it were, should be over the ball as he kicks. If there is any tendency to bend the body back it is almost certain that the ball will rise.

In shooting with a dropping ball on the half volley the player ought to learn to open out his instep by pointing the toe of the foot to the ground. This also helps to make for a low flight.

The correct balance of the body is very important in the case of the wing forward, when making his centres. Some outsiders have great difficulty in getting the ball up.

Even Duncan, the clever Derby County outside left, often sends the ball over so low that it is intercepted before it reaches a colleague waiting in the goalmouth. I suspect that Duncan's trouble in this matter is that at the moment of kicking the weight of his body is too far forward. As I have stated, to get the ball to rise the weight should be behind and not over it.

It is true, of course, that the player has not always time to think about such matters as body balance. He must shoot at once or the chance to do so will be gone. But if only the principles I have pointed out are appreciated, much can be done by practice and by cultivating the habit of running over the ball and not behind it.

For one thing, that is the way to keep it under close control. A player who runs over the ball is Hugh Gallacher, and I do not think there is a man harder to dispossess. It is so difficult to get at the ball in a tackle without fouling him.—Copyright: N.F.L.

McLeishan (Club Capt.), E. O. Murphy, S. Fowler, S. Shields; sitting—J. M. Wilson, W. J. Brown, F. W. Allen and R. A. Bates. Notable absentees from the photograph are G. P. Lammert, F. Lammert, T. J. Price and A. Tate. (Photo: Ming Yuen).

Y.M.C.A. ENJOY GOOD HOCKEY

BRITISH BOYS' GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Will Be A Really Open Event

In future, the Boys' Golf Championship is to be an open affair—really open.

A new ruling which has been given by the presiding Committee will permit the entry of caddies. In this respect, Great Britain has now stepped into line with America. Maybe a happy omen for future international matches.

This ruling will also affect many others who in the past have cold shouldered golfers, greenkeepers, golf club stewards. In future these boys will be encouraged to enter for their championships.

American has always regarded the caddie as an amateur golfer for the purpose of tournaments provided he does not carry clubs after the age limit.

Many American collegiate students may be seen carrying clubs with a good deal of pride. They are working their way through college. Some of America's most famous amateur golfers were formerly caddies. Chick Evans and Francis Ouimet are two of them.

American schoolboys carry clubs for hire and for the fun of the thing during the vacation which extends over the summer months. At Boston, not long ago, there was one lad acting as caddie whose uncle is a famous millionaire. Recently, a party of boys from an amateur golf club came to Europe on a tour financed partly by the money they earned as caddies and it is possible there may be entries from the United States for the next boys' championship at Carnoustie in August.

SEASON A PROGRESSIVE CLUB

IMPROVED MATCH RECORDS

The Y.M.C.A. hockey club has just brought to a close another very successful season and an analysis of the play during that season shows a marked improvement on last year.

Three teams have taken the field and altogether have played 99 games. Of this number 43 have been won and 33 lost, 14 draws making the aggregate. The three XIs have found the net on 292 occasions while their own citadel has only fallen 162 times. Last season they played 82 games, won 25, lost 38 and scored 155 against 187. The records of the three individual teams are as under:

P. W. L. D. F. A.
1st. XI. .... 29 13 13 3 52 52
2nd. XI. .... 28 11 10 7 52 45
"A" XI. .... 33 10 10 4 98 65

The leading goal scorers are G. H. Fowler 68; W. J. Brown 51; G. J. Sommer and S. Fowler 10; G. C. Burnett 9; G. Lammert and R. Baldwin 8; W. J. Brown headed the list last season with 36.

At full strength the "Y" are a team to be reckoned with and this is accounted for by the keenness of all members. Several of the players are also representatives of other Clubs but the "Y" always has first choice of their services. The membership is increasing rapidly with the growing popularity of the game and with the return of T. J. Price and A. Tate from home leave and the inclusion of F. Lammert, next year should see, even greater things coming from them than the past season. Two of the keenest players are S. Shields and L. D. Skinner, both goal-keepers. Each has been included in the first side and next year with a little more practice should be two of the best keepers in the Colony.

Three French Boxers for Shanghai

INCLUDING EMIL PLADNER

Emil "Spider" Pladner, former world's flyweight champion, Alime Raphael, former European lightweight title-holder and now one of the outstanding European welters, and A. Hugues, French featherweight, will be seen in action in Shanghai in July provided negotiations between their manager and local boxing promoters are concluded successfully.

The trio of French fighters, led by Mr. Keichi Ishiguro, a Japanese jiu-jitsu expert of Paris, left Marseilles for Tokyo on April 14, and are due to arrive at Kobe on May 18. The French scrappers are scheduled to appear on two programmes to be held in Ryogoku on June 5 and 10, and another card to be staged on June 18 at the Koshien stadium near Osaka. The visitors to Japan may also appear on a card to be held in Tokyo during the latter part of June.

It is understood that the French boxers, if the negotiations with local promoters are satisfactory, will visit Shanghai before returning to France, and that should arrangements be satisfactorily carried out, they will make the trip here in July.

SNOOKER TOURNNEY.

R. Young Wins Y.M.C.A. Championship.

In the final of the European Y.M.C.A. snooker championship last evening, R. Young defeated J. R. Luke by 153 to 138. The match was three frames and Luke held a lead of eight on the first and 11 on the second.

In the third Young drew level at 101. He gained a lead of seven but Luke again passed him. With the last four balls on the table Young led by one with the scores at 135-134. Luke potted the brown ball and gave himself a difficult angle shot on the blue at the centre pocket. It was pot or leave and the ball hit the jaw and ran into an easy position. Young sank it and missed the pink.

Both players played the "six" ball several times before Young scored with a fine long shot to win.

Scientific Attempt to Solve Mystery of Cricket Bat

Jardine, Sutcliffe and other leading English cricketers are to take part in a scientific attempt to solve the mystery of the cricket bat.

The perfect bat is temperamental as the perfect violin. It must be made of a willow that is exactly "right," or it is useless. What the qualities are that make a willow exactly suitable, only a few bat-makers, whose eyes have been trained from childhood, can distinguish.

That is bad enough, because growers may wait 20 years for their bat willows to mature, and yet find, when the buyer arrives, that they have been cultivating useless trees all the time.

Young willows look exactly alike for years. The differences appear when it is too late. But in addition, Essex is almost the only place from which good bat willows come, and Essex is suffering badly from willow disease.

So the Forest Products Research Laboratory at Prince's Risborough has been trying to find what species of willow it is that bat makers choose. With the aid of microscopes and other instruments they have examined the willows chosen by the experts, of Messrs. Stuart Surridge, bat makers, who are assisting them, and even now they are not sure whether they know botanically what a bat willow is.

They believe that they are beginning to know, and they want to make sure that it is a species, and not just the result of local conditions in Essex.

They have chosen bat willows in Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex and Surrey, examined the wood of each with minute care, and given them to Messrs. Stuart Surridge to season and turn into bats.

The seasoning process has just begun, and by next year the bats will have been made. Then, Jardine, Sutcliffe, and the others have promised to try each bat and report on it.

Scientists will work out the comparison between these reports and the dossiers they possess of the wood from which each was made. Then at last the secret which makes one willow good and another willow useless, for making bats, may be solved.

In addition, it may or may not be shown that Essex conditions are not essential for making good bats. In that case agriculture in the rest of England will acquire a new branch, in which foreign competition can scarcely attack it, in the planting of bat willows for the cricketers of the world.

MOTOR FATALITY INQUEST.

DRIVER OF CAR GIVES HIS EVIDENCE

Further evidence was taken yesterday by Mr. Schofield, sitting as Coroner, with the assistance of a jury, in an enquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of a young Chinese woman school teacher, Yeung Wai-lee, who was killed in a motor accident in Victoria Road on March 11. Her sister was injured.

Kwok Hung-ki, the driver of the car, said he was employed by Messrs. Gocke and Company. He met the two girls, through a man named Mok, at the Tai Tung Commercial firm, about four months ago. Since then he had seen them often. He went out with the deceased's younger sister, Yeung Wai-yuk, and also played mah jongg with her. Before the accident he used to go out with the girl, the elder sister also coming on some occasions.

In reply to the Coroner, witness said his relationship did not go beyond the ordinary friendship. He once went to Macao with her. It was a very cold day in Macao, and they intended returning by the 3 a.m. boat, but as there were no cabs available they stayed in the Ho Kien Hotel.

Since the episode at Macao there had been no coolness between him and Yeung Wai-yuk, and they were on as good terms of friendship as ever. They went out together less frequently as she had returned to school. She came to the garage sometimes alone and at times with her sister, and she also visited him at his family house, 367, Hennessy Road, second floor. She complained to him about Mok. That was in January. Mok had alleged she had too many male friends. She asked him (Kwok) to give up Mok's company. She made no further complaint until the day of the accident, and there had been no complaint against himself. One day she showed him a letter which he read but could not understand the contents. It was signed by one Chan. He could read. At her request he read the letter which he kept for several days as he had forgotten to return it.

Kwok said he thought she had discarded the letter, which contained unfavourable things about her. It was a lengthy letter. He gave her back the letter about three days later.

Regarding a dinner which was held at Aberdeen, witness said that he was invited by Yeung Wai-yuk, who informed him that he was the principal guest. He invited Kwong Chang-hung to keep him company. After the dinner the party returned by way of Shaukiwan, and later went to the Oriental Theatre with Mok, whom they met at the garage.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

HOST AND GUESTS ARRESTED AS MANCHUKUO AGENTS

Peking, Apr. 28. Gendarmes, police and military raided a restaurant this morning while a birthday party was going on and arrested the host and 16 guests who are alleged to be Manchukuo agents engaged in subversive activities here.—Reuter.

A car. It was the same car which was involved in the accident. Witness drove it several times himself, and found the foot brake to be not in good working condition, due to an interior defect, which he could not explain. The carburettor pin was also defective. The car had been sent to Ah Yau and Company for repairs, but he could not say which mechanic in that firm had done the repairs.

Questioned with regard to the life insurance he had taken out, witness admitted he had taken one in the Ping On Insurance Company for $3,000 and $2,000 in two years, and also another in the Tai On Company for $1,000. He never took in the same company for more than one year. He had no particular object in taking out the insurance, except that he was a motor-car driver. It was common for drivers to insure themselves.

On the evening of the day prior to the accident, he had telephoned up the girls' house, and Yeung Wai-lee had answered the phone. He was informed by her that they desired to speak to him, and asked him to bring the car along the following morning at 10 a.m. On the following morning, he went to Li Yee and got the car, promising to return it by 12.30 p.m. He went to the girl's house after 10.40 a.m. He sounded the horn, and both girls joined him. Yeung Wai-lee asked him to take them round the island. They went through Wan-chai and Shaukiwan. On the journey Yeung Wai-yuk told him that Mok was still spreading stories about her, and requested him to accompany her that evening to Mok's house so that she could get an apology. At first he said he had no time as he had to attend a meeting, but eventually he agreed to accompany both girls to Mok's house. They reached Aberdeen about twelve noon, and he invited both girls to tiffin, but they refused. He then got out of the car to telephone Li Yee to inform him he could not return the car by 12.30 p.m. He was delayed a quarter of an hour as the telephone was engaged.

At this stage, the inquiry was adjourned, and next Monday and Thursday afternoons were fixed for hearing.

ORIENTAL HOTEL TO PAY FINE

The dispute involving the Canton Anti-Japanese Boycott Society and the Oriental Hotel (an affiliation of the Sincere Company Limited) following the pickets' discovery some weeks ago of 27 cases of alleged Japanese goods, has been settled through the efforts of the Canton Kuomintang. The pickets at first charged the management of the Sincere Company also in connexion with the seizure.

In the course of the lengthy investigation the Sincere management pleaded ignorance of the presence of the alleged Japanese goods, which the Oriental Hotel manager said had been left without his knowledge by some boarders many months ago. Both the Sincere Company and the Oriental Hotel strongly protested against the Boycott Society's imposition of a fine of $100,000 upon each of them.

After further deliberations and enquiries the Society, which at one time threatened the forcible closure of the Sincere Canton Store and the Oriental Hotel, has now announced the verdict, reducing the fine on the Oriental Hotel to $50,000. No fine will be imposed on the Sincere Company, because it has proved its ignorance of the presence of the goods in the Hotel godown.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

While in Albany, N. Y., recently arranging for the Northeastern New York Championship Bridge Tournament of the American Bridge League, I found in the following hand in a rubber game an interesting point.

Giving your opponents a chance to make a mistake will win you almost as many games as the cards themselves.

The Bidding

South, the dealer, has two major suits. However, the heart suit is five cards in length and should be bid first. The opening bid should be one heart.

West is not quite strong enough to make a sound overcall and should pass. North's proper bid is two hearts. He holds two doubletons, normal trump support and a five-card suit.

East overcalls with two spades. South debates whether to double two spades or to proceed with hearts and finally decides to bid for game at hearts, so the final contract became four hearts.

The Play

West opened the queen of spades—the top of his partner's suit. The three was played from dummy and East played the seven, his lowest spade.

Should the declarer win this first trick with the ace? Before playing to the trick, let us count up the losing cards. Declarer has two possible diamond losers, one club loser, and a sure spade loser.

What chance has he to gain the extra trick needed for game? East has played the seven of spades. Ordinarily this is considered an encouraging card and asks the original leader to read this as the lowest card he has.

Declarer decided that the best possible way to gain the extra trick was to drop the six of spades on the first trick, concealing the deuce, and in this way try to entice West to continue the spades.

While some players might think to shift to a diamond, West cannot be blamed for continuing with the five of spades. This the declarer wins with the jack, and now takes two rounds of trump, picking up the outstanding trump.

He next plays his ace of spades, discarding the three of diamonds from dummy. A small spade is then trumped in dummy with the ten of hearts.

The deuce of clubs is returned from dummy, declarer plays his king, and West wins the trick with the ace. He now leads a diamond and though East wins the trick with the ace, declarer can lose no further tricks, as he has a good heart in dummy with which to trump a diamond if West were now to continue with diamonds.

Of course, if East returns a club, declarer will discard his two

DIOCESAN OLD GIRLS. ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION

The seventh annual general meeting of the Diocesan Old Girls' Association was held on Thursday at the Diocesan Girls' School.

There was a very large attendance of members.

Minutes of the sixth annual general meeting, the annual report for the year under review and the statement of accounts were read by Miss Anderson, the Hon. Secretary.

The year's working showed but little profit, but the credit balance of the Association stands at $2,638.76 at the end of the financial year. These reports were unanimously passed.

D.O.G.A. Scholarship.

Miss Robinson, the President of the Association, was in the chair, and in addressing the meeting, thanked the members of the Committee for their loyal support during the year and also thanked the Headmistress for the use of the School for meetings and functions.

She also went on to say that one of the fees aims of the Association had been realised in the establishment of the D.O.G.A. Scholarship, which was presented to the School for the first time at its prize distribution last March.

During the year the Association held moon-light picnics, walks and dances which were largely attended.

Officers Appointed.

The following ladies were elected to serve on the Committee for the ensuing year:

President, Miss W. Robinson; Vice-President, Miss M. Kacker; Hon. Vice-President, Miss H. D. Churn; Hon. Treasurer, Miss I. Gittins.

General Committee.—Miss P. J. Anderson, Miss K. Grose, Miss K. Gourdin, Miss S. Ho, Miss D. Kotewall, Miss Doris Lee, Mrs. M. D. Versoona and Mrs. E. C. Thomas (associate member).

The three was played from dummy and East played the seven, his lowest spade.

Should the declarer win this first trick with the ace? Before playing to the trick, let us count up the losing cards. Declarer has two possible diamond losers, one club loser, and a sure spade loser.

What chance has he to gain the extra trick needed for game? East has played the seven of spades. Ordinarily this is considered an encouraging card and asks the original leader to read this as the lowest card he has.

Of course, if East returns a club, declarer will discard his two diamonds on the two good clubs. This play of refusing to win the first trick when holding ace-jack is termed a Bath coup and often presents itself at the bridge table.

SUM OF $3,700 LOST.

REPORTED BURGLARY IN A MONGKOK FLAT

The large sum of $3,700 was stolen by a supposed burglar who, between 1 a.m. and 6 a.m. yesterday, entered the top floor of No. 144, Tung Choi Street, Mongkok, according to a report circulated by the Police.

The thief apparently secured entry by way of roof, and it is supposed he received assistance, as the money, which was kept in a box in a bedroom, appears to have been too easily located.

The victim is Lau Chiu-yeung, a married woman who said that the money was all in notes, included five of the $500 denomination.

CAUSE OF FEAR.

REV. G. K. CARPENTER'S TALK TO PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

Fear as a fundamental psychological element received the attention of the circle of the Hongkong Practical Psychology Club at a meeting at Lane, Crawford's restaurant last night.

The subject was introduced by Rev. G. K. Carpenter, who presented his talk by comparing the Eastern and Western viewpoints.
He said that fear essential to the evolution of the human race, was strongest in the primitive, but like the development of the child's reasoning as it grew into manhood, it tended to lessen with his progress from darkness into light.

The potential capacity for fear differed with each person and in the more extreme cases it took the form of an obsession, over-anxiety and misapprehension. The speaker dealt with re-actions both in the child and in the known cases concerning adults, and also spoke of that complication commonly described as a "fear of fear" which he said was more of a moral apprehension than dread of physical injury.

The subject was taken up by others in the gathering, and at the conclusion a vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Carpenter for his instructive address, on the call of the Chairman, Mr. Wei Tat.

CHEAPER MOTOR VEHICLES

WIDE RANGE OF THORNYCROFT PRODUCTS

Thornycroft's have recently issued revised Price Lists and Data sheets for all their current types of freight and passenger chassis.

At first sight, these appear to offer an almost bewildering range of 50 freight chassis alone, until it is noticed these group themselves into 8 distinct classes of four-wheeled, and 6 classes of rigid six-wheeled chassis, in addition to which are six separate types of passenger chassis.

In every class are offered alternative types with normal or forward control, standard or long wheelbase, four or six-cylinder engines, and, on the heaviest eight chassis, the further option of petrol or oil fuel power units, thus giving buyers the widest possible choice, in which every purchaser should be able to find a vehicle which is practically certain to answer his particular requirements and conditions of service.

The new Thornycroft programme is a wonderful example of standardisation in manufacture, yet offering a wealth of optional features, such as we have described, for all the alternative types in the various classes of Thornycroft chassis have most of their parts in common, while many of these are interchangeable between one class and another;
thus, supplies of spare or replacement parts are kept within reasonable limits, in spite of the wide range of alternative chassis
the makers are now able to offer.
Copies of the new lists are obtainable from any Thornycroft Branch. Messrs. Thornycroft have their own Branch in the Colony at Pioneer Bldg., Nathan Road, Kowloon.

TWO HOMERS FAIL TO PROVIDE WIN

New York Yankees Lose to Washington

Washington, Apr. 28.

Mr. Harridge, President of the American Baseball League, has suspended Chapman, Myer and Whitehill, the three players concerned in the disturbances which nearly caused a riot in one of the meetings between the New York Yankees and the Washington Senators a few days ago, for five days.

The suspension became effective from Wednesday last and each were fined one hundred dollars.

The suspension ends on Sunday so that the players will be eligible to play on Monday next.

BRITISH PRICE LEVEL

EXPECTED TO RISE
SHARPLY

London, Apr. 28.

Although the firm tone exhibited in the early dealings on the London Stock Exchange was not fully maintained, the underlying tendency of the markets was cheerful, assisted by rising commodity prices.

The City anticipates appreciable advance in prices and index figures at the end of the month.

The signing of the Denmark agreement and the announcement that an understanding has been reached in Argentine financial and trade negotiations are regarded as encouraging developments.

British bonds registered gains of 1/16 to 1/8 with War loan 3 1/2 per cent. at 100 ex-dividend.—British, Wireless.
